Yes, the founders were gay and the Wax Trax store was a meeting place for the subculture. Spend less time repeating this and showcasing the awesome music that came out of that subculture. I actually enjoyed how they timeline everything. However, they did not even report some rather significant events of the scene. I was very excited about this doc. The doc's focus is very much on the founders and very little on the actual bands and music, except how they relate to the founders. Although interesting, it wasn't really what I applied for. I found that repeating the same points over and over again. I learned a lot about the history of the bands I thought I knew. They also seemed to downplay Jourgenson's role on the label and the scene I thought.
